Did Somebody say Urban Forest?

By Gregory Purnell, Chair

s The term urban forest, or forest in the urban realm, an oxymoron? Not!! The urban forest is a true pleasant reality; your neighborhood, my castle, our everyday existence. We're all urban forest dwellers. Do we live in a forest? Well boys and girls, the unequivocal response to such a query is yes, yes, yes!! First, we must understand that a query usually asks questions from all directions; one simple answer generally won't suffice.

What forest? What is a forest? More particularly what is an urban forest? That answer can easily be found even as we read these words. Just gaze outside the nearest window. I can just imagine that you see the grass and that tree over there; wait a minute there's another tree next to those shrubs. I know now you can't resist the urge to step closer for a real gander down the street. "Five, six, twenty two, gosh, there are almost 40 trees in my view", you're thinking. "You know, I hadn't really noticed the flowering trees in Mrs. Thompson's yard were so pretty; of course she just loves to spend time pruning and mulching them".

Now that you've seen that panorama in a different light, digest this. If you could count 100 trees in just about the size of a square block, and the trunk of half of those trees was at least 2 inches wide at the height of your chest, guess what? That meets the criteria of a good ol' traditional forest with houses in it. Now, if you count less than that but there are plenty of shrubs, flowers, bushes and green grassy lawns in your block and the next one is similar, as a matter of fact every block has some of the same greenery, that my friends is the beginning of the urban forest.

Remember last summer, boy! July was a hot one wasn't it? Those lazy after work hours in the backyard, smoking that grill and relaxing under the maple tree, sipping on that cold.... well you've got the picture. That fresh clean air, those cool breezes, man, it doesn't get any better than that. Were it not for the urban forest, one could not enjoy such a scenario. First of all, outside would be out of bounds; too muggy, smelly and that sun never shows any mercy. There would be nothing to enjoy. Square edges, straight lines, and hard surfaces would prevail, in other words the blahs.

Maybe your community is one of the 144 Maryland PLANT Communities throughout the State. Truth is, every neighborhood could and should be in a PLANT Community. What is PLANT you say? I'm pleased to inform you that they are communities wherein are found "People Loving And Nurturing Trees".

Those

understand the benefits and importance of the resourcefulness in creating and maintaining green spaces such as parks, treescapes, streetscapes, and groves of trees. Beauty, practicality, and functionality are just a few reasons to treasure our urban forest. Landscaped homes make aesthetic neighborhoods which contribute toward making forested communities. These are components of the town's or city's urban forest. They are integral elements contributing to Maryland's precious forest ecosystem. The urban forest therefore, begins in your backyard, next to the smoking grill which appropriately is stationed under that maple.

The Maryland Community Forest Council extends our congratulations to the following communities, schools and other groups for receiving PLANT awards for 1999.

Goshen Elm Designated Maryland's Millennium Landmark Tree

The "Goshen Elm", a 75 inch diameter English elm located in Gaithersburg on Goshen Road, has been selected by the America the Beautiful Fund for a Millenium Landmark Tree designation. This tree is located on the site of a new subdivision in Montgomery County. Through the cooperation of the Montgomery County Department of Public Works and Transportation, the Montgomery County Department of Park and Planning, the Maryland Department of Natural Resources Forest Service and the Alliance for the Goshen Elm (AGE), a citizen group, site plans were designed, and specifications for stress reduction were developed, to ensure survival of this magnificent tree. Through local research by AGE, it is believed that the elm was planted in the late 1700's from a seedling brought from Europe by the owner of a 3000 acre estate that is now part of Gaithersburg. A stone marker designed by Maryland artist Mary McCormick will be presented at a ceremony involving government and community representatives permanently identify the tree.

The Millennium Landmark Tree program is part of Millennium Green, an effort of the White House Millennium Council to encourage people in every community to use this historic turning point in time to recognize the importance of our landmark trees. America the Beautiful Fund is a national, nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization started in 1965 at the White House Council on Natural Beauty to encourage citizen efforts and to protect the natural and historical beauty of America.

Champion American Smoke Tree to be Transplanted

Purdue University has agreed to transplant the National Champion American smoke tree (Cotinus obovatus) out of the way of a construction project that would have destroyed it. This will be an historic event: the first time anyone has preserved a National Champion tree of any species by transplanting it. However, it will not be the largest tree of any species ever transplanted. The technology has been tested previously with larger species like oaks and pines, so we know it can be done. This tree is 40 feet tall with a trunk about 8 feet in circumference, and the root ball probably will weigh about 30 tons. To learn more contact:

Legislative News

Below is excerpted text from a letter sent by Congressmen Jim Moran (VA) to Chairman Regula and Ranking Member Dicks in support of funding for our programs.

"Federal support is appropriate for urban and community forestry efforts because by making the best ecological use of trees, we can avoid the extremely expensive alternatives of regulation and enforcement. By helping cities meet air and water quality standards through the preservation and replacement of trees, we can save millions of federal dollars. These efforts allow us to leverage local support and Englishivy is a vine that can be found anywhere people have lived. It is used as a ground cover (often to stabilize ground and to grow in shady areas where little else will grow) and also as a climbing vine on buildings. But if left unchecked, it becomes a bothersome, invasive weed.

The ivy forms thick carpets and chokes out native vegetation. Then it creeps up trees into the canopy, flowers and forms berries. Unfortunately, birds eat the berries and disperse seeds to other locations. Germination is high, and plants spread rapidly!

Why is this so bad for trees and forests? The climbing vines are long-lived and grow large, thick trunks. Insects live between the bark and the vine, leading to potential problems. As the thick green ivy creeps up and out the limbs, it cuts off light source to the leaves, which eventually kills the smaller branches. Soon, the entire limb is weighted down with vines. The weight causes the limbs to break. This is not just a problem in private landscapes when ivy is left unchecked. Ivy covers many forest floors and climbs trees in public parks and recreation areas. It may seem attractive, but it literally strangles trees and drastically degrades the natural habitat.

You can control ivy problems by keeping it away from trees. Remove it by hand when soils are wet. Cut ivy vines off tree trunks with a knife, hand pruner, or a saw may even be necessary to remove the thicker vines. Watch the stems and roots for resprouts. On public land, consider working with volunteer groups to pull or cut the ivy help restore the native environment, and protect valuable ark your calendars for this years MCFC Community Forestry Workshop in Westminster for Tuesday, October 24th. Hear the latest information on insects and diseases, diagnostic techniques and plant health care from research scientists and practicing arborists.

Westminster Workshop 2000

Last year's sessions included an arboricultural update outlining new products and techniques for pest management and drought stress, a review of Maryland laws to protect trees and people, root collar excavation and new tree planting standards. Field sessions included an Air Spade demonstration, insect, disease and plant clinic and a case study in tree inventory, policy and the development of a municipal tree maintenance program.

All participants received a manual with technical information on all the above topics. Plan now to attend this years Workshop. MCFC members receive a registration discount. For more information about the 2000 Workshop contact Katrina Tucker at 410-848-4363.
